Water Conservation Kits Help Save Dollars

DECATUR –As incentive to homeowners whose homes were built before 1992, DeKalb Watershed Management is offering complimentary water conservation kits to DeKalb County residents. Citizens can now request complimentary water conservation kits through <http://www.dekalbwatersewer.com/conservation.html> and kits will be mailed to those DeKalb residents whose homes meet the aforementioned requirement.

“DeKalb County is being proactive by looking at various opportunities to be water-efficient outside of the current water restrictions,” says Chief Executive Officer Vernon Jones. “Water conservation kits are our way of providing DeKalb homeowners with an incentive to save money and also conserve water that will benefit our environment.”

The “water-smart” kits focus on three main components: determining your water usage, detecting leaks and checking and changing water fixtures. They are designed to save homeowners money and create awareness about how much water is actually being used in homes throughout the county.
